Nana and Papaâ€™s Visit and Would You Let Your Wife Cut Your Hair?

Description

Seriously, who needs teeth anyway? Canâ€™t we all survive on pureed foods?

We are in full blown teething mode over here, and Avery is constantly reminding us every secondâ€¦â€¦â€¦not kidding.

default watermark

Poor girl, life is hard.

This past weekend Nana and Papa came over to have dinner at our house. They hadnâ€™t seen Avery since Motherâ€™s Day when we brought her to their house for her 6 month photos.

Iâ€™d say sheâ€™s changed a little; crawling, â€œtalkingâ€•, and sprouting a few teeth.

After everyone ate, Avery provided the entertainment for the evening. She could crawl anywhere (within reason) around the house, but chose to go under the table just to make it difficult to get her. No worries, though, Papa joined her to see whatâ€™s so great about her chosen location.

Not sure what is was, but the hung out down there for a while. Eventually, she climbed out and her and Papa had a little peek-a-boo time.

Where is Papa?

There he is!

She wasnâ€™t buying it. Teething can really â€œtake a biteâ€• out of your sense of humor, huh?

Avery actually enjoyed most of the day, but for some reason she just wouldnâ€™t show smiles for the camera. We really have to work for those smiles now!

After Papa had his Avery fix, Nana could hardly resist scooping Avery in her arms for kisses. Iâ€™m going to guess Avery isnâ€™t quite ready to return kisses thoughâ€¦

Just a wild guess.

We moved outside to our backyard for a bit and Avery practiced standing in the grass as Kelley held her hands.

The air was stagnant and even with the sun starting to set, it was hot, so we migrated back inside. We played with Avery a little longer until Nana and Papa had to head home. It was great seeing them, and I know Avery enjoyed their company, despite her expressionless face in the pictures!

The next day, Sunday, in an effort to â€œcutâ€• costs, I agreed to have Going Mom cut my hair. We bought a new hair cutting kit for just less than the price of one haircut, so after just one cut, weâ€™d be in the green!

default watermark

I normally try to wait a month before getting my hair cut, so it was getting pretty messy and growing over my ears.

Here it is from the side: before

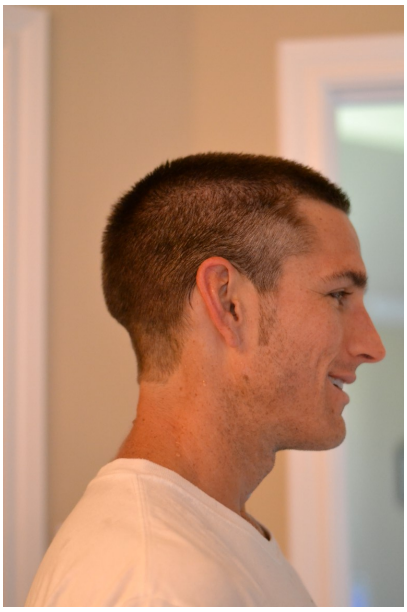
I never fix my hair or do anything with it unless my wife asks me to, which isnâ€™t often thankfully. When I had an office job, just the act of putting something in my hair stressed me out. Yeah, itâ€™s a minor thing, but just what it represented pissed me off.

Anyway, after a few YouTube videos and reading the included instruction manual later, Kelley started her first time attempt to ever cut anyoneâ€™s hair. At first, I wasnâ€™t too worried, but as she started laughing and saying â€œIt will get betterâ€•, I had an immediate face palm reaction.

default watermark

But, in the end, Iâ€™m pretty happy with the results. Itâ€™s a lot shorter than I usually have it, but definitely makes it easy to wash and thereâ€™s no way to style this now!

Itâ€™s taken some getting used to, for both of us, but Iâ€™d say itâ€™s growing on me. Ha ha, get it?



Now I donâ€™t have to wait a month or more before my next hair cut, and hopefully Kelleyâ€™s statement, â€œIt will get betterâ€• holds true.

default watermark

So, would you let your spouse/partner cut your hair if they never have before?

Date Created
2014/07/16