

Putting My Stay-At-Home Dad Skills to the Test

Description

Remember how I recently wrote about how my wife is leaving us? Well, she left hours before most people wake up to start their day and by the time youâ€™re reading this, she should be in Boston.

Are you there, dear? Text me! ðŸ™, Oh, and pick up some Yuengling to bring back home please!!

For the next 3 days, Avery and I will be without Going Mom, but hopefully weâ€™ll still have a great time. Iâ€™m excited and nervous about testing my true ability to go it alone, but I know many parents do wayyyy more than this on a daily basis. So whatâ€™s 3 days with just one baby?

Guess Iâ€™ll find out.

In the meantime, my 3-day plan is to focus on taking a lot of pictures and posting the good ones on here for my wife, Kelley, to enjoy. Of course, I hope that all viewers will enjoy the pics too.

If youâ€™re a baby-loving person who enjoys pictures and not a lot of yapping, Iâ€™m positive youâ€™ll like my next few posts. Since I plan on focusing more on my time with Avery, the posts will be less talk and more walk pictures.

Maybe just a few words about the pictures I am posting for the day, but nothing extreme. Youâ€™re welcome.

To kick things off, Iâ€™m posting several photos Iâ€™ve taken lately and simply love how they turned out. Kelley has already seen these, but theyâ€™re cute nonetheless, and donâ€™t you try to say otherwise! Even that crazy baby selfie.

She was determined (hence the tongue) to reach the ground, but just couldnâ€™t quite make it.

Everybodyâ€™s happier when their almost naked, right? Oh, and they have a blue ring and look like a boy when theyâ€™re really a girl. Oops, did I say that?

Just in case she misses me already, here I am with my makeshift cape before she gave me a haircut the other week. Note to self: hair is attracted to the static from a plastic trash bag.

When itâ€™s been a rough day, thereâ€™s nothing like Mommyâ€™s fluffy sock and an even fluffier bear to make things all better.

Hopefully, both my wife and Avery and I are having a great start to the week and will be able to FaceTime tonight.

Check back tomorrow for pictures of our first day alone.

To those of you laughing at my measly 3 days when you do this every day, any tips/advice you care to share?

Any stories from when you used go it alone or did at least once?

Date Created
2014/09/29