Set realistic goals

You can't expect to go from sedentary to running a marathon overnight, so don't set yourself up for failure. Start small and work your way up – this strategy will help you stay committed and motivated when times get tough! Make sure you have the right equipment! This includes everything from gym shoes, sweatbands, gloves, etc. It makes all the difference in the world when you're out there working hard with proper gear on your side. Don't have any? Check out our fitness products section! Schedule time in your day for exercise. If you don't put it in your planner, chances are it won't happen. Try waking up earlier or going to bed later – whatever works best for you.

Get a Relaxing Massage

Working out causes much wear and tear on your body, especially if youâ€™re lifting weights. A massage is a perfect way to speed up recovery and prevent injuries! Donâ€™t you think you can afford it? Change up your routine. If you always do cardio first, try weight training instead; or switch things up and start with strength training one day and end with cardio the next. The possibilities are endless â€“ make sure youâ€™re challenging yourself! Have fun doing it. Itâ€™s less likely that youâ€™ll burn out when working toward a goal means spending time having fun with friends.

Get enough sleep

Working out is only as good as the foundation itâ€™s built on. First, make sure youâ€™re getting enough sleep so your body can recover and be ready for the next day of training! Try our Sleep System for a better nightâ€™s rest. Take care of yourself. When weâ€™re tired, stressed, and run down, itâ€™s easy to start neglecting ourselves and letting our health slip away â€“ donâ€™t let that happen! Treat yourself with some extra TLC; eat right, drink plenty of water, and most importantlyâ€¦ give yourself room to breathe. It may seem difficult at first, but before long, youâ€™ll find that taking care of yourself is one of the best things you could ever do.

Eliminate stressors

From your life. If you have a gym partner or trainer that is highly competitive, consider taking a break from working out together for a while. The same goes for any other stress areas in your life â€“ get rid of them! Go back to the basics. Donâ€™t try to add too many different exercises at once; this will lead to confusion and burnout. Instead, focus on mastering perfect form with just a few basic exercises until youâ€™re ready to move on to more advanced moves.

Find an exercise you love

Consistency is the key to any fitness routine, so if you canâ€™t stand doing something, itâ€™s unlikely that youâ€™ll stick with it â€“ no matter how effective the exercise is. Try different activities until you find one that brings a smile to your face each time! You may like running or biking, but what about martial arts? Or boxing? Find something that works for you and embrace it! Just make sure it isnâ€™t too high impact; otherwise, your body wonâ€™t be able to recover in time for the next workout session.

Stay consistent!

We all have those days when working out isnâ€™t at the top of our list. But donâ€™t let yourself get discouraged! Instead, try to work it into your routine as often as possible â€“ even if itâ€™s only for 5 minutes. If you keep making excuses, it wonâ€™t be long before you find yourself back where you started; whereas if you find a way to chip away at your fitness goals every day (even for just a little while), soon enough, youâ€™ll end up exactly where you want to be.

Fitness is something that requires a lot of hard work and dedication. Donâ€™t get discouraged by the first week or two! Itâ€™s extremely common to feel restless and tired at the beginning of any exercise routine, but stick it out, and youâ€™™ll be amazed by how much better you feel after just a few weeks.
