

The Pooping Chair

Description

Admit it, we all have a favorite time, place, position, and/or style when it comes to pooping. If poop talk makes you squeamish, 1 â€“ you must not have kids or they are so grown you donâ€™t have to clean up after them anymore, and 2 â€“ itâ€™s completely natural and we all do it!

Yes it stinks, and yes, cleaning it is NEVER fun, but that doesnâ€™t mean it canâ€™t be fun-ny! True?

Going Mom and I have yet to start potty training Avery (we should really get on that!), but we are picking up on her very non-subtle pooping queues. Red face, grunting, brief moment of silence after making a lot of noise, and sitting at your feet are all very strong indicators.

Yes, I did.

For Christmas, Kelley and I decided to limit the toys we got her since she has plenty and we knew family would most likely take care of that, which they did! So, we bought her a mini-armchair with her name embroidered in pink.

She took to it immediately and let us know with her giant grin!

And I'm not 100% sure, but I think that very same day is when she decided her new chair would be a perfect home base when the time came for a good poo. I'm even convinced we captured her as this thought went across her mind..

Yep, this will be the perfect chair for pooping in my diaper.

Fast forward to present day, and she's been going to her chair almost every day to do the deed.

Busy!!

It gets quiet, sometimes I hear a stressful grunt while in the kitchen, and next thing I knowâ€¦

Done. Clean me!

Sometimes she doesnâ€™t quite make it to the chair, but she gets close. I think this embarrasses her thoughâ€¦

I tried to make it, but it wouldnâ€™t stop!

And so, this is our first big indicator for when we do start potty training. If she goes to the chair and she gets quiet, itâ€™ll be time to bring her to the pot!

Does your kid have a favorite spot to go poop in the house?

Any other visual/audio cues that they are "making mess" in their diaper! or worse! undies?

Please share all the gruesome details in the comments. Hold nothing back, it takes a lot to gross me out! ðŸ™,
