Fresh Raspberries You Canâ€™t Eat?

Description

You canâ€™t even pick them or find them on store shelves, but you might find them in stores.

Iâ€™m sure you see where Iâ€™m going here; these are the kind of raspberries you blow making aâ€• pbtpbtpbtpbtâ€• sound along with a little or a lot of spit.

Avery has been giving us plenty of these fresh from her mouth each day. She blows them when sheâ€™s happy, she blows them when sheâ€™s mad, and hell, she blows them when sheâ€™s sleeping!

Itâ€™s been going on for a while now, but lately sheâ€™s making a point to show us how well she can make raspberries at all times of the day. Emphasis on â€œallâ€•.

default watermark

Weâ€™ve woken up to the sound of raspberries emanating through the baby monitor at night, and she blows them every time we change her. I get that babies love to do new things they learn, and itâ€™s cute, but whatâ€™s not cute is that she has also found her high pitch voice.

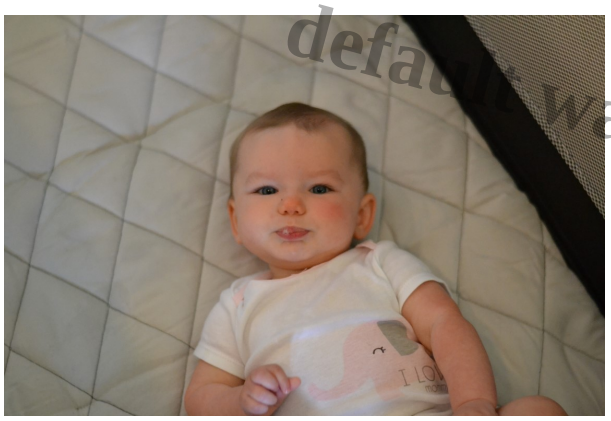
Ugh, anytime sheâ€™s crying (which is a lot since sheâ€™s teething), it has to be in the highest pitch she can muster. My throat hurts just listening to it, and I have no clue how she carries on for so long. But you pick her up and youâ€™d think nothing was ever wrong; she just goes back to raspberries and smiles.

Since sheâ€™s given us several pictures of her raspberry blowing in action, I want to share the photos with you today. Enjoy the pics, and please share any raspberry stories you may have. Iâ€™d love to see the pictures of your kidsâ€™ raspberries if you have them; just share them on Going Dadâ€™s Facebook page please!

Raspberry Selfie

The â€œIâ€™m not listening.â€• raspberry.

The â€œHey, my cheeks are huge!â€• raspberry



The â€œLast one before bedtime.â€• raspberry

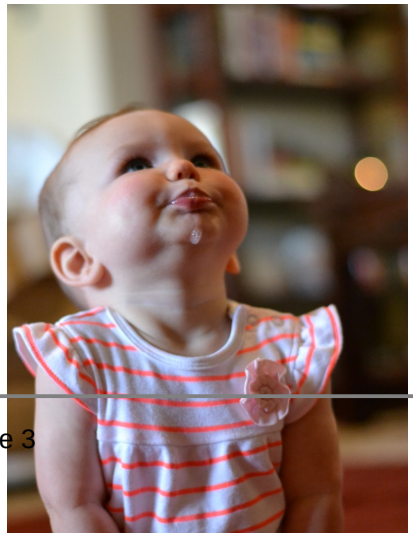
The â€œThis is what I think about giant bows.â€•

raspberry

The â€œI can do anything and still be cute.â€• raspberry

default watermark

â€œIâ€™m innocentâ€• raspberry



â€œLook at meâ€•
raspberry

Date Created
2014/06/13

default watermark