

Going Dad™s Top Ten Pinterest Picks (7): Food Matters!

Description

Do you know exactly what went into the last meal you ate? If it wasn't you making the meal, chances are, you may not.

This way of thinking has had me making my own meals for several years now. There are times when I go out to eat, not by my choice, and I have to pick apart the menu and annoy the crap out of our wait staff. But, I have no shame when it comes to wanting to know exactly what I'm being served and how it was prepared.

I wasn't always like this, I used to go out all the time and the words macronutrients, calories, trans-fat, high-fructose corn syrup, MSG, etc. were never a consideration. If it looked and sounded good, I ate it. Back then, I was being "healthy" when I requested no cheese on my double-meat hamburger from McDonalds.

Yeah, things have changed and now I'm a health food advocate who questions any and all ingredients. If it's packaged, I have to scrutinize the label several times and maybe even perform a Google search. For the several years I've been like this, I get extremely irritated at how food companies advertise their "healthy" products and at the ignorance of the average consumer.

And now, as a parent, I'm disgusted at what some parents feed their children. I might get a lot of negative responses here, but I see no reason any kid should have to eat fast food. There is a wealth of information out there on what is healthy vs. unhealthy and enough buzz on the topic to claim you "didn't know."

I know Going Mom and I will instill our healthy values in Avery, but I fear how powerful the influence of her peers will be. I remember what it's like being in grade school, and how no one wants to be the odd one of the group! All I can do is hope Avery values health and knows what is good and what is not when she's faced with choices on her own.

Hopefully, these ten food related Pinterest Pins help open your eyes and inform you in a way to be able to make changes for the better. I know right after I changed my eating habits, I felt, looked, performed, and recovered better than ever before. I could easily go way beyond ten, but for these are a great to start with to make changes today!

Hopefully you found some or all of these thought-provoking and useful to help you start making changes for yourself and loved ones. Or maybe youâ€™re already in the know and these are nothing new to you.

If you already are a health living advocate and you have older children, how have you worked to keep your little ones from eating fast food or other processed junk when at school or a friendâ€™s house?

I would love to hear anyoneâ€™s tips/advice as I feel like we are a minority when it comes to caring about what we eat.
