Diet

The key aspect of being healthy is watching what you eat. This may sound simple but there are a lot of hidden nasties in food products, even in ones you deem to be healthy. There was a scenario not so long ago where a salad contained large quantities of salt, therefore the salad wasn't very good for you. You should be aiming to consume one of each of the key food groups with each meal. These include carbohydrates, proteins, fats, dairy, fruits, and vegetables. If you struggle to eat these or are on a special diet meaning you can't, then you might want to look into taking a multivitamin or supplement to help your body get what it needs.

Water

As well as eating a well-balanced, healthy diet you need to also make sure you are drinking water regularly. You should aim to drink at least eight glasses of water a day, this equates to around two liters. This is just the minimum recommended amount, if you drink more than that then that's great. Water helps keep your body and mind hydrated, without it you can end up with regular headaches, dizziness, and lack of concentration.

Checkups

It is essential to your health that you attend regular checkups with your doctor. This not only ensures you are fighting fit but stops any unwanted health problems sneaking up on you. If you regularly suffer from sinus infections and flare-ups then you might want to mention this as there could be some treatment available. Believe it or not, some remedies help sinuses in the form of what you eat. Take a look at foods for sinus infection here, it might be worth a shot to get rid of it and prevent it.

Sleep

Next, take a look at how well you are sleeping. You may not know it but the amount of sleep and the quality of sleep you get could be affecting you day to day. You should be aiming for around six to eight hours each night to function well. You can of course function on less than this but it is not sustainable. If you regularly wake up and have disturbed nights then this might be something to look into. It may be something as simple as your mattress being old and lumpy.

Lifestyle

Finally, if you are wanting to be your very best self then take a look at the type of lifestyle you lead. If you are inactive, smoke, or drink then it may be worth changing this up a bit. It can be very tricky getting up and about, especially if you work long hours at home or in an office. Remember, you can enjoy everything in moderation. If you are having one glass of wine a week, then this is much better than enjoying one or two each night.
