

“The Little Regenerative Farmer”: A Children’s Book About Farming

Description

Lina visits a petting zoo with her family and tells her parents she wants to start a farm. They tell her it’s a lot of work, but she persists and gets her own chickens and starts a garden. She encounters obstacles like nosey neighbors and harsh weather. But eventually, she wins everyone over and her farm grows under her love, and she achieves her dream of a bountiful farm that feeds her family and community.

Lina uses Regenerative Agriculture techniques which is a new emerging trend of how to farm in a way that is beneficial for the planet. We hear so many stories demonizing beef production but very few people know, it’s the method that’s actually the problem! Using Regenerative Ag techniques, we can sequester carbon from the atmosphere and increase food nutrition along with millions of other benefits.

Farmers like Lina face many obstacles. With this book, I hope to encourage other passionate people who may be considering committing to life as a farmer to not let others’ opinions keep them from doing something that is so important to humanity and the environment. It truly is a book that can motivate any aspiring regenerative farmers and all children who have big dreams.

If you'd like to see some more info about the book, please visit the website here.

Date Created
2022/04/05

default watermark