

It's Here! The Onya Baby Outback Carrier!

Description

Christmas in July! March!

Baby wearing is a daily occurrence for Avery and me, and I don't know how I'd be "Going" anywhere but crazy without it. Since Avery was 2 weeks old, I've only used the Baby Bjorn carrier to wear her everywhere. Long walks, store trips, and chores around the house have all been in the Baby Bjorn...until now!

The very kind Diana from Onya Baby agreed to send us their Onya Baby Outback carrier to use and review on this blog! I first gave news that we'd be getting this carrier for active parents in this post. The Outback was provided to me free of charge, but all thoughts and opinions will be completely my own.

I can't explain how excited I was when I first spoke with Diana and she agreed to send one. Now that we have the Outback, I'm anxious to go everywhere with Avery while wearing our new "ride"!

I wanted to capture the “Active Parents” part.

Here is a description and list of features on the Outback directly from Onya Baby:

Whether you’re out with your child wandering the urban jungle or hiking with them in the hills, the Onya Baby Outback offers a new approach to the soft-structured carrier. A durable, water-resistant, rip-stop nylon exterior and air-mesh lining makes it perfect for hot weather or hiking the trails. Parent and child will stay cooler with the air-mesh lining, which wicks away moisture leaving you both comfortable. It can be worn as a front-pack or backpack, and comes with an integrated seat that will fit almost any chair “for when you’ve decided to take a break for lunch and the restaurant doesn’t have a seat for your little one.

- Rip-stop nylon body and air mesh lining
- Patent-pending integrated chair harness with safety strap
- Tuck-away sleeping hood
- Low-profile shoulder straps
- Contoured low-profile, supportive waist belt
- Sternum strap for adjustable comfort
- Double-entry, side-zippered koala pouch and patch pocket
- Seat darts for child’s comfort
- Leg padding for baby
- Toy loop on each shoulder strap
- D-ring for attaching key clip (key clip not included)
- Safety-tested to 75 pounds
- Machine washable
- Instruction manual

Since she’s still pretty young, Avery has a bit of growing to do before it has a better fit. But until then, Diana generously provided a “Baby Booster” for smaller babies. I already tried Avery both with and without the booster and can tell it helps to have it in right now. Avery appreciates the extra boost too!

Although a review is the main thing I will write after using the Onya Outback for a while, I will be posting frequent updates along the way. Since part of our daily routine is going for long walks, I plan on providing daily or weekly time/miles spent in the Onya Outback along with any notes.

Hello, World!

Also, be on the lookout for posts about exercise routines using the Onya and possibly doing different types of home maintenance inside and out. What I am really looking forward to is taking Avery on a nice trail hike. The Onya Outback is made for hot weather and hiking and Iâ€™ll be sure to make use of its features often!

Today, after putting Avery in the Outback for the first time, she was a little fussy, but eventually calmed down. She calmed down so much, she fell asleep for 40 minutes! When Kelley got home, we took it for a test run walk for about a mile and so far Iâ€™m impressed! The initial setup was a little difficult, but itâ€™s easy to get used to quickly.

After our walk

Iâ€™m saying goodbye to the annoying weight the Baby Bjorn put on my shoulders and hello to the comfort of the Onya! Make sure to check back frequently for current updates on where Iâ€™ve gone with Avery in the Onya and my thoughts.

I want to thank Diana and everyone at Onya Baby for being so gracious and giving me this opportunity to review their premium baby carrier!

Are you a fan of baby wearing?

Whatâ€™s your favorite carrier and what do you look for in one?

Date Created

2014/03/18