Futureâ€™s So Brightâ€¦.

Description

Too cool for schoolâ€¦or anything.

The song â€œThe Futureâ€™s So Bright, I Gotta Wear Shadesâ€• by Timbuk3 instantly came to mind as we put these shades on Avery today. Yep, here I am already going against my whole taking it easy with the picture taking, oh well!

We had a great Monday with Kelley (a.k.a Going Mom) being off from work. Avery let us sleep another hour extra and she was in her crib from 9pm to a little past 5pm! Score! She even took a 3 hour nap uninterrupted later in the morning too! Whatâ€™s with this baby?!

Kelley and I were able to get what we wanted to do out of the way; yard work for Kelley and work out for me. Today I have squats on the agenda so Iâ€™m really hoping she has another long nap! Squat day is always the biggest challenge physically and mentally for me. Watching a baby monitor is just an extra challenge too since I need focus. Anywayâ€¦

Monday was really pleasant. Avery took the bottle from me for a while which was better than the day before, and she also fed from her mom. Best of both worlds. She was hardly fussy and even went on an hour long walk with us while facing out in the Baby Bjorn without a peep!

Avery ended up falling asleep as we neared the end of the walk, but the instant I stopped moving, her eyes fluttered open and that was that. We tried some tummy time, no good, then just had a little play time as she flashed us her heart warming smiles.

Enjoying Mom on Monday

We tried once again to capture some priceless shots with the video camera and digital camera, but didnâ€™t get much. The smiles eventually turned into cries so I gave her the rest of the bottle from earlier and then mom provided the rest.

One of the better shots I wanted to share.

Another short nap and she was up with us while I made dinner and played with her a little. It wasnâ€™t a very action-packed Monday, but having Kelley here was really nice and I hate that she has to be at work again. But we have to get paid somehow; thanks dear!

So, not much happened most the day, which is very welcome after Sundayâ€™s Fuss Fest! But then, as night time arrived, we were subjected to mostly this until bed timeâ€¦..

But she did give us a few more smiles in between. Weâ€™ll take it. She also hadnâ€™t pooped in 2 days, and we were treating her like ticking time bomb that even Jack Bauer canâ€™t disarm.

Finally, this Tuesday morning, she graced us with her crap. I figure she was waiting until mommy had to get ready for work so daddy could tend to the cleaning. Fine by me! We had another good night of sleeping in the crib too. I fear the day the streak ends because of teething or her first illness. Ugh, Iâ€™ll keep my fingers crossed this lasts a while though!

Now that she finally went I have high hopes sheâ€™ll go back to being her nonchalant self with a bright future aheadâ€¦

Okay, next

Avery, as the title of the post says, you have a very bright future dear, and I am so happy your mom and I are hear to shine the light! We love you!

Do you like â€œaccessorizingâ€• your children and taking pictures? How do they like it?
