Goodbye Office, Hello Home!

Description

As much as Iâ€™ve enjoyed sitting at a desk staring at a computer for almost 6 years, Iâ€™m excited to announce Iâ€™ll be leaving in 3 working days on January 28th, 2014!

Avery at 2 months. Not sure why this thing is so close to her.

Do I have another job lined up? You bet I do, itâ€™s as a stay-at-home dad to our dear daughter Avery. Sure, my nerves crawling like ants after you kick their mound, but I am looking forward to my new role. Luckily, my awesome and lovely wife, Kelley, will working to support us financially as we enter into this phase of our lives.

Iâ€™m hoping to document the good and the bad times our family experiences as we make this journey of raising our daughter and figuring out how to make the most of these changes.

I plan on cooking a lot since we never go out to eat unless itâ€™s a special occasion and hope to share my favorite recipes on this blog. I will also post random thoughts and other things related to health, fitness, and nutrition as these are things that interest me. Hopefully, later on in life, I would like to find work in these fields, but the focus is all on Avery for now!

If youâ€™re reading this, thank you for stopping by and welcome to my new blog. As I figure out a schedule and get my new life up and running, I hope to be able to consistently post at least twice a week. If you have any advice, Iâ€™m all ears and would be ever so grateful to consider what you have to offer.

Stay tuned as fun times are sure to follow as Iâ€™m â€œGoing Dad.â€•
