

Best Safety Gear For The Adventurous Motorcyclist

Description

For most motorcyclists, the experience of riding is more than enough, even if it's a trip to the gym or work. However, plenty of bikers like to go outside of the beaten path and explore new places on the back of their ride.

If adventure is part of your motorcycling experience, then you want to make sure that you prepare yourself beforehand. Part of it is making sure that you have the best Yamaha accessories, and the rest is knowing your limits, so you don't put yourself in danger.

Full Face Helmet

If you are a casual rider, then a half or three-quarters helmet is more than enough to protect your grey matter. However, to protect yourself on your wild adventures you will need an Arai full face helmet, just in case of a wipeout or collision while out on the road or trail.

All Weather Gloves

Part of being adventurous is heading out regardless of weather. While it's nice to bike when the sun is shining, if you're committed to getting the best experience, then rain or other weather shouldn't prevent you from going out. Therefore, make sure your hands don't freeze by giving them all-weather gloves.

Thick Riding Suit

Along with decent gloves, you need to have an all-weather suit to protect the rest of your body. You should already have something to keep you safe on the road, but when it comes to exploring the great unknown, you want an extra layer of comfort, so you don't get too cold (or too hot).

Touring Bag

While most bikers ride for a few hours at a time, the most adventurous ones will take a long road trip and see where their bikes take them. If that's something you're interested in, then you will need a weatherproof touring bag to hold all of your stuff. Because you don't have a trunk on your motorcycle, a bag will be the only way to stay prepared out on the road.

Overall, if adventure is what you seek, you have to make sure that you go about it in the right way. Be sure to upgrade your Yamaha accessories and bring all the proper gear for any eventuality. Just be sure to check your EBC brakes before you head out.
