

Skid Steer Hunting On Her WOOM 1 Balance Bike

Description

I have a feeling weâ€™ll be skid steer hunting all summer long. Anyone following my social media accounts mightâ€™ve noticed our adventures to the new phase development in our neighborhood while riding her WOOM 1 Balance Bike. My favorite is when we spotted the butt hugging bobcats.

I have since taught her that Bobcats are a type of skid steer loader, and not all of them are Bobcats. Sheâ€™s catching on quickly. Now she knows the white one is a Bobcat and the yellow one is CAT.

Our most recent adventure, however, was probably a little confusing for our construction loving tot. Under a clear blue sky, light breeze, me in my boot from a stress fracture that never fully healed, and riding her â€œRocketâ€, we went on a hunt for the skid steer loaders busy at work in our expanding development.

Might as well add it to the list of things to let heal after my shoulder surgery coming up this month!
Keeping positive!..

The adventure started off a little dull since the first skid steer loader sighting was one not busy at all. Unless you count taking a nap, like Avery says, as being busy.

Shhh, donâ€™t tell, but I may or may not have let her sit inside empty cockpit. Hey, anything for a cute smile. Amiright?

With sounds of beep beep and rrrrrrnnrrrr, we knew a busy Bobcat or other skid steer was nearby, so we carried on with the hunt. Me hobbling on a boot trying to keep up with our girl who puts the Rocket inâ€™.ummmm â€œâ€œRocketâ€•. After a little searching for the sound, we finally found a John Deere skid steer (yay, a rhyme!) loader hard at work scooping the earth with finesse.

The scooper moved up and down, which, obviously, meant he was waving back. We watched it move the dirt across the land for a minute and journeyed on in search of more skid steer prey. But this time, instead of Avery doing the hunting, a Bobcat came right up to us!

Slightly confused, the driver gave a hesitant wave back to the little girl in pink as she said hi to the passerby. Oh man, Iâ€™m on a rhyming roll!

With more ground to cover, we hit the road in search of the next construction vehicle. In the distance, we saw another CAT hard at work and a couple dump trucks full of dirt. Finally, we stumbled upon another Bobcat working on new lots. It was a good time to stop for a minute to take a break and pose in front of the rigid-framed machine.

You can tell from the look on her face that having daddy ask her to turn around for the 50 millionth time is wearing on her. I just want to watch the skid steer loaders, dad!

Our loop through the new phase was nearing an end, so I promised to stop bugging her and just have fun exploring around the new construction. With a handy-dandy app on phone, I tracked our total time and distance for our hunting adventure which came out to just under 2 miles.

With several stops to watch and wave and me in my boot, Iâ€™d say 43 minutes is pretty good. Now we have a goal to beat this time/distance, Iâ€™ll let you know how it goes. ðŸ™, Thereâ€™s nothing like rewarding yourself with a cool dip in the pool after a long hunting trip via bike and boot, and thatâ€™s exactly what we did.

Just what we needed. Hopefully this trend continues as weâ€™re both having fun in the sun and it doesnâ€™t cost a ton. Okay, Iâ€™m done with the rhymesâ€¦for now.
