Unfortunately, there is no instruction manual on how to be the perfect dad, so you can be forgiven if you don't know everything about parenthood! Like most of us, you probably stumble along day by day and learn as you go along.

Still, this doesn't mean you shouldn't take a few skills-based courses now and again, or pick up a few books to improve your learning. You see, there are some skills all dads should master and these include the following.

#1: First aid

Bee stings, wounded knees, burnt fingers – there are all kinds of ailments and injuries that our children can suffer from. Some of them will be minor while others will require emergency treatment. While you can whisk your children away to the nearest hospital or doctor's surgery, there will be times when you have to apply some kind of first aid yourself. For this reason, the types of courses available at cprcertificationnow.com could prove invaluable to you. They will also come in handy should you have to assist older members of your family, such as your parents or your in-laws.

#2: Carpet cleaning

Children are rarely the cleanest of people! Not only can they make a mess of their own clothes while eating, drinking, and playing, but they can create a mess within the home too. You will know this already if your carpets have ever been hit with food, drink, and paint spills. There have probably been times when you have had to act quickly to remove such spills before they become stains. But if your carpets are currently every shade of the rainbow, it might be that your efforts were unsuccessful. So, let carpet cleaning be one of the skills you learn. There is lots of great advice at this oldhouse.com so have a read and learn how to keep your carpets clean.

#3: Mediation

If you have more than one child in the family, you will understand the need for mediation skills. Siblings have a tendency to fall out, even over the silliest of things, and sometimes you will be called upon to solve any issues. If you say or do the wrong thing, slammed doors might be the consequence, and other things your children might do when they get into a temper tantrum. As a dad, your job is to promote family bonding, so arguments need to be nipped into the bud quickly. So, read any books on the subject of family mediation, look for articles online, and sign up for any classes that are happening in your local community.

#4: Car maintenance

You will understand the convenience a car can bring to your family. You will have the opportunity to go on road trips together, and such tasks as the school run and grocery shop can be made easier. Of course, cars do have a tendency to break down, so life isn't all smooth sailing. From punctures to engine faults, all manner of things could go wrong. This is why you should learn a few car maintenance skills. By knowing the basics, you could prevent problems from happening in the first place, and deal with certain issues when they arise. So, consider taking a car maintenance course to improve your skills in this area, and sit down with your car's user manual to get a handle on your vehicle.

After learning these skills you will become Super Dad! So, consider our suggestions if you haven't learned these skills already.
