

Plan Toys Push Along Duck Review

Description

You know those toys you had a long time ago but forgot about until going through some mystery stash in the corner of a room? Then, all of the sudden they are a favorite once more? Our daughter's Plan Toys Push Along Duck is one of those toys.

We first got the duck, Quackers (original, I know), around the time our little girl started walking over a year ago. I remember growing up with one of those plastic push along poppers with balls enclosed in a bubble and how much I enjoyed running around making the most obnoxious noise and knew I did not want something like the Fisher-Price Brilliant Basics Corn Popper for Avery.

Fun toy for kids, but we try to limit the amount of plastics in our home, so this was an easy one to avoid. Just not a fan of everything that comes out of China to begin with. Plus, how cool is it to have a wooden duck with flappy feet to push around instead?

Yeah, itâ€™s pretty cool, Dad.

When Quackers first waddled his way into our home, Avery enjoyed the new toy but didnâ€™t seem too impressed.

Yeah, I see the duck, but do YOU see I took off my sock?

I think Going Mom and I were more excited about the cute rubber feet flip-flopping along as it was pushed around the house; usually by us. One of Avery's friends was instantly drawn to it during our NuttZo tasting party last year, and that's all she played with the entire time. Obviously kids love once they see, feel, and hear it in action.

The natural rubber feet, which are easy to clean (trust me, this is a wonderful thing!) don't make as much of an audible flappy noise as I'd expect. Guess it's not such a bad thing, but when compared to the noise a Corn Popper makes, the feet are almost ninja-like. One reason is that the wooden wheels are very squeaky, almost to where you can't even hear the feet flapping, and can quickly become irritating when your kid goes on a marathon duck pushing jaunt. An easy fix for this is something like WD-40 or, as I used, coconut oil. Problem solved!

Just the look and feel of the Plan Toys Push Along Duck proves it was built with quality care. Our destructive tot further proves this as it has stood up to the vigors of daily abuse. The paint has yet to chip and all of the parts are just as sturdy as the first day we bought it.

The latest use for Quackers is for him to "help" Daddy every time I vacuum. It's cute, but when Quackers winds up between my feet and knocking into my legs multiple times as I clean around the house, it gets old. fast. But hey, if it makes my girl happy and not crying, I'll take it!

We love having fun, eco-friendly toys like the Plan Toys Push Along Duck, and Iâ€™d highly recommend one for any kid aged 1 and up. I wish the handle could be detached to make it easier for travel, but thatâ€™s a minor issue. Iâ€™m more concerned with getting hit by the rounded end on the handle, which happens A LOT. But again, just a minor thing thatâ€™s easily overlooked when it comes to the safety and happiness of our kid.

Plan Toys is one of our favorite eco-friendly toy companies as they use a variety of material like organic rubberwood, e-zero glue, water-based dyes, recycled and recyclable materials, soy and water-based ink and their proprietary PlanWood. All good things when it comes to what our kids are playing with all day.

Pros

- High quality, eco-friendly construction that will last years
- Sturdy, but light enough for little ones to easily push and maneuver
- Makes for great imaginative play—like a vacuum, for instance
- Freakin’™ cute duck on a stick, what else can I say?

Cons

- Wheels are very squeaky (can be fixed with a little oil as I mentioned)

- Wish the stick could be removed for traveling
- Can become a dangerous duck when it gets airborne or pushed into your legs, knees, and sometimes head.

If you're looking for a great gift for an upcoming toddler birthday, this is a perfect choice. At just \$24.99 on Amazon, it won't break the bank but will warm the heart watching those little feet push their duck with a big grin!

*I purchased the Plan Toys Push Along Duck at full price and was not compensated in any way for this review. All thoughts are strictly my own. Although I never collaborated with Plan Toys for this or any review, I'd love to work together for future product reviews. Hint Hint to any Plan Toys associates who happen upon this post. ðŸ™,*
