

10 Best Places To Live as an American Golfing Enthusiast

Description

As a golfing enthusiast, finding the perfect place to live involves far more than the allure of pristine fairways and challenging greens. Factors like climate, local amenities, and communities that appeal to your lifestyle all enter into the equation. In the United States, numerous incredible locations cater to not only the expectations of golfing aficionados but an array of lifestyles. If you're a golfer who's looking for an amazing place to call home, take a look at some of the nation's most highly recommended locales.

1) Kuna, Idaho

Kuna, Idaho may not be one of the most publicized golf destinations, but it's certainly a hidden gem. It offers some of America's most exhilarating golfing experiences with the Falcon Crest Golf Club being one of the most noteworthy. As home to two particularly extraordinary courses, it could be considered the centerpiece of the city's golf scene.

This city is also highly touted because of its affordable cost of living in comparison to other golf-oriented areas. While Kuna itself offers several amenities, nearby Boise promises even more dining, shopping, and entertainment opportunities. There are 55 plus communities in kuna, idaho, too, so those who come to this city have no trouble finding one that suits their lifestyle. Its small-town charm combined with top-notch golfing experiences make it a perfect place for golfers to settle down.

2) Pebble Beach, California

Another renowned golfing community is Pebble Beach, California. It's home to world-famous courses like Pebble Beach Golf Links. Cypress Point Club, The Hay, and Poppy Hills are also popular courses in the area. Of course, Pebble Beach offers the stunning coastal California beauty quite a few people are looking for in a hometown as well. It's a breathtaking place to live and golf, and it offers plenty of other amenities for people to enjoy.

3) Scottsdale, Arizona

Scottsdale is one of the more widely known cities for golfing enthusiasts. It has more than 200 golf courses for honing your skills and challenging your limits. The Troon North Golf Club and TPC Scottsdale Stadium Course are only a couple of the options at residents' and visitors' disposal. With an average of 330 days of sunshine each year, you'll have plenty of time to play and enjoy the desert climate.

4) Palm Beach, Florida

Florida is a leading destination for both golfers and vacationers alike. People who live here get to enjoy vacation life all year long, and the Sunshine State boasts a variety of golf communities. Still, Palm Beach stands out from the rest with its luxurious lifestyle and championship-caliber courses. The PGA National Resort and Spa is a hotspot for both pros and amateurs, but that's only one of the local options to choose from.

5) Grapevine, Texas

Texas likewise offers pleasant year-round weather though summers tend to be a bit warmer than some people prefer. Despite the summer heat, countless people flock to Grapevine for its golfing experiences. You'll find a range of courses that accommodate all skill levels, but Grapevine Golf Course is one of the most beautiful. Cowboys Golf Club, the world's only NFL-themed course, deserves its fair share of attention as well.

While the South and West have many options, the Midwest also has great spots for golfers. Minnesota is a top choice for people who like green spaces and summer play. The Twin Cities area has many parks and recreation areas that include high-quality play. You can find some of the best public golf courses in twin cities if you look near the metro area. These spots have fair prices and good layouts for every skill level. It makes the region a strong pick for anyone who wants a balance of city life and outdoor sports.

6) Hilton Head Island, South Carolina

Hilton Head Island has long been a vacation destination, and its bustling lifestyle appeals to many people. It has been voted one of the best places to live in South Carolina for several reasons, but for golfing enthusiasts, some of those credentials are fairly obvious. Harbour Town Golf Links with its iconic lighthouse is one of the more popular courses in the area.

7) Bend, Oregon

If you're looking for a permanent mountain escape, Bend, Oregon may be the destination for you. Numerous outdoor activities draw people to the area, and golfing is certainly a big piece of the puzzle. You'll find an array of golf courses amidst the area's breathtaking landscapes. Though you may need to take a brief break from golfing during the winter months, the weather is usually pleasant and accommodating.

8) Highlands, North Carolina

Highlands, North Carolina is also a renowned area in the mountains for those who prefer a cooler, less humid climate. Old Edwards Club, Highlands Country Club, and Wildcat Cliffs Country Club are only a few of the must-experience golf adventures in this portion of North Carolina. This was a popular area for Scottish immigrants to settle in centuries ago, and their golfing culture continues to reign supreme.

9) St. George, Utah

St. George, Utah has long been known for its beautiful landscapes. It's also famous for its first-class golf courses. Sand Hollow Resort, the Ledges of St. George, and Coral Canyon Golf Course are among the unique desert golf experiences you'll find in this area. You can spend your time off the course gazing at the breathtaking scenery and marveling at the year-round comfortable weather.

10) Kapalua, Hawaii

Tropical getaways are in high demand these days. People who are fortunate enough to actually live in those highly sought-after paradises don't have to venture far to enjoy a vacation lifestyle. In Kapalua, you can combine the benefits of the tropics with the pleasures of some of the world's best golf courses. You'll have the opportunity to sharpen your skills while reveling in the beautiful scenery.

Living the Golf Life

If you'd like to move to a place where golf can be an even bigger part of your life, there's no time like the present. While there are numerous perfect locations for golfing enthusiasts across the United States, the ones mentioned here are among the most incredible. Picturesque courses, wonderful communities, and diverse amenities only make these areas more attractive.

Date Created
2023/09/11