9 Month Photo Session: Is This What Cat Scratch Fever Looks Like?

Description

Well, weâ€™re back home and back to being parents again. sigh

Okay, we missed our precious little Avery, but we also enjoyed our time together. Thankfully, G-Ma had a great time with her and survived the weekend!

Thank you so much, mom, for watching Avery and keeping her so happy. I think sheâ€™s already missing you, so we canâ€™t wait long until we see you again. I promise, we wonâ€™t leave you alone this time! ðŸ™‚

Itâ€™s always tough trying to get things back in line after coming back home, and weâ€™re still try to get adjusted. I plan on sharing a recap of our 7th anniversary â€œstaycationâ€• along with a review on our stay at the Embassy Suites in Downtown Fort Worth sometime soon, but not yet.

Today, I have photos from our 9 month photo session with Avery to share. Not even an hour before taking these, Avery was â€œplayingâ€• with our cat, Lou, who â€œplayedâ€• back by swiping at her forehead. The result was this lovely ~6 inch scratch.

It looks bad, but we were relieved when she never cried. Guess thatâ€™s part of being hard-headed, huh? But, I think the scratch affected her in other ways by making her even crazier than she already is.

The 9 month photo shoot was the most difficult yet, and cat scratch fever seems the only logical explanation. Check them out and let me know what you think.

The initial setup

Might be the best one

Annnnddd right to the bear.

Now Iâ€™ll just crawl off this chair.
Gravity, whatâ€™s that?

Time to readjust

Take that, bear, I can stand on you now!!

Mommyâ€™s turn to contain the wild child. Check out the booger on that nose!!

Another setup attempt.

Hey, you, I thought I was just standing on you!!

Hmm, this is comfortable.

No more pictures!!

Okay, just a few more.

Am I being difficult?

Hey, check out my feet, theyâ€™re at my chest!

Here, take my side profile as I grind my teeth.

Oh, the floor. My parents are getting smarterâ€¦.finally.

This is all youâ€™re getting, no more pics!

And thatâ€™s all we got, just as she said. The session was eventful, as expected, and we can only imagine how the 10 month shoot will go.

Has your baby ever been scratched by the cat or dog of the house? Was it bad?
