Daddy-Daughter Photo Book: Birth to 19 Months

Description

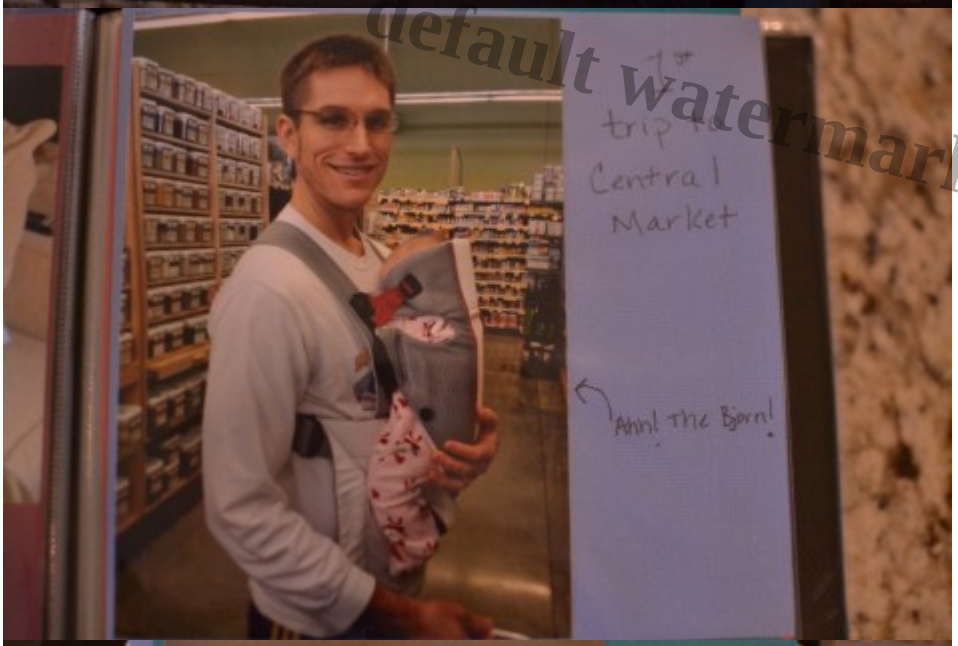
For my first Fatherâ€™s Day, Going Mom made a Dad and Avery photo book that means the world to me. Itâ€™s not just something anyone can buy, and she put some obvious love and quality time into making it.

default watermark

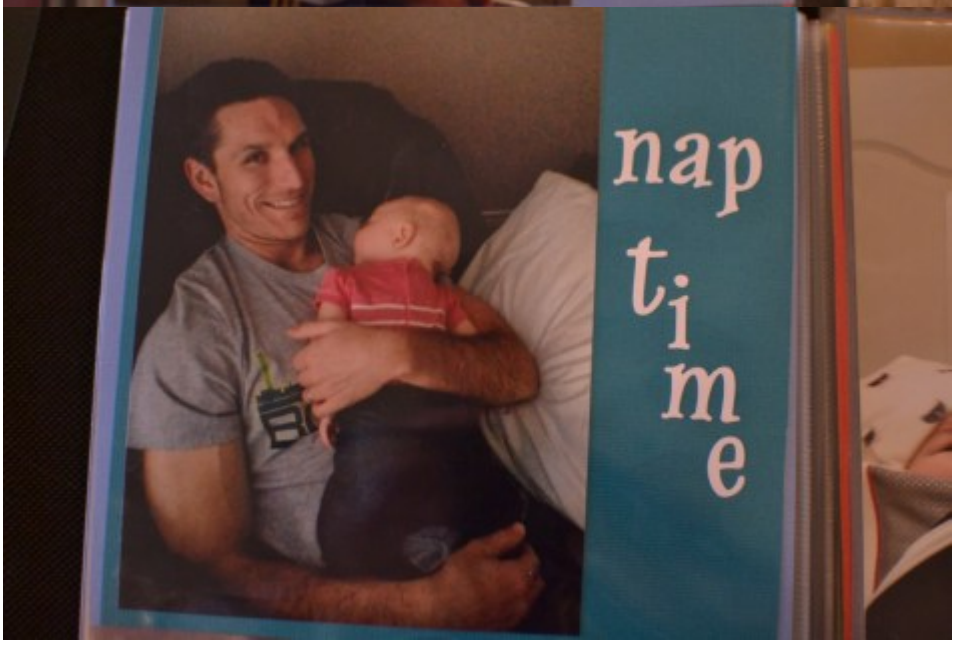
This year, for my second Fatherâ€™s Day, she slipped the book from itâ€™s spot on our bookshelf (or tried, because I noticed it was missing) to add to it with more daddy-daughter photos. In my last post, Kelley was in the process of putting it together as I wrote (all hail nap time!), and after seeing the final product, my heart turned from mush to pure liquid. Kinda sounds bad, but trust me, itâ€™s a good kind of mush-to-liquid.

I love it so much and every time I flip through the pages beginning from the first day Avery was born to just a few weeks ago, I am still amazed at how much she has already grown. I figured Iâ€™d share the entire book in a post for everyone to appreciate Kelleyâ€™s lovely crafting skills and pictures we will hold dear for eternity.

love
default watermark
Just like Daddy
snuggles



default watermark



default watermark

default watermark

default watermark

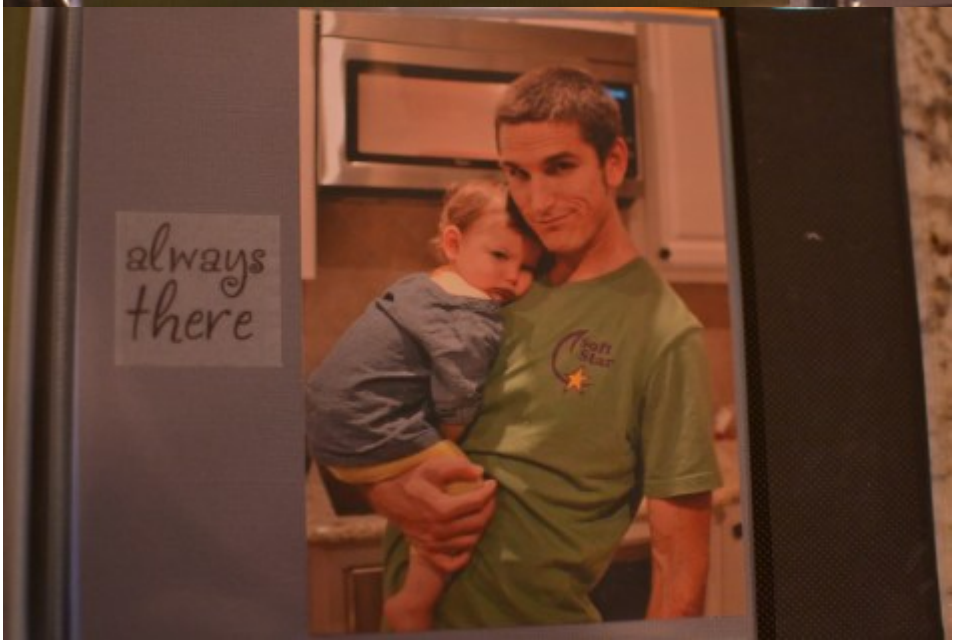
default watermark

default watermark

default watermark

you
me

default watermark



always
there

default watermark

Iâ€™d like to note, the pictures of me wearing Avery in a Baby Bjorn are before we learned of the dangers of wearing babies in â€œcrotch danglersâ€• for impeding their hip development among other issues. Plus, having them face outward is also not the best. Not judging, Iâ€™ve obviously been there too, but I stopped right after learning of this and hope any babywearing parents will consider the same.

Okay, Iâ€™m done with the thought of the day. I canâ€™t express my gratitude to Kelley enough for making this book of memories, and wish I was at least a quarter as crafty as her so I could do the same. Makes my photo coffee mug I got her pale in comparison.

Iâ€™ve said it already, but THANK YOU, Kelley, for being such an amazing wife/mother and for the best gift ever. Oh, and the beer of the month club is just stevia sweetened icing on our homemade chocolate cake! ðŸ™‚

Do you love sentimental gifts like these or prefer getting gifts from retail stores instead?

What would be your favorite personalized gift to receive? A photo book, jewelry, framed picture, kitchenware, etc.?

default watermark

Date Created
2015/06/24