Incoming!! Pictures of a Teething Baby

Description

Weâ€™ve been pulling the teething card on Averyâ€™s crankiness for several months now, starting when she was four months. Now, just days away from 8 months, we can actually confirm teeth are pushing their way through her gums.

Iâ€™m sure you experienced parents know the feeling, excitement and fear combined, and weâ€™re definitely going through this now. On one hand, itâ€™s exciting to watch our baby grow and hit another milestone, but at the same timeâ€¦.TEETHING!! AHHHH.

Okay, Iâ€™m calm againâ€¦for now.

Since our little girl will soon have boob-threatening teeth, I wanted to create a post with a picture compilation of Avery chewing on different things. Completely random, I know, but this is what my blog is all about; sharing our journey.

default watermark

Rahr
Rahr

default watermark

chicco

default watermark

So, what do you think makes the best teether?

Actual teethers, bear heads, pink balls, green balls, wooden spoon, yellow balls, recorders, carrots, plastic rings, inflatable balls, cucumber, Daddyâ€™s finger, or bear paws?

Right now, Iâ€™d say itâ€™s a draw between pink balls and the wooden spoon.

Date Created
2014/07/12