

Healthy NuttZo Cinnamon Banana Frittata Recipe

Description

Remember that frittata recipe I never made? It had NuttZo, cinnamon, and a ripe banana combined with eggs to make a sweet and satisfyingly healthy frittata.

Well, I made it, and it was just as delicious as I imagined. If not better! As usual, my recipe tester approved!

I tried giving her a bottle of milk to wash it down, but she quickly handed it right back and demanded more NuttZo banana frittata.

Since Avery is my boss, I obliged. Extra NuttZo on top just for brownie Daddy points.

And then it disappeared into a happy (and healthy) belly.

Want a happy and healthy belly full of this NuttZo Cinnamon Banana Frittata for yourself? Hereâ€™s what you do!.

Whisk 2 eggs, 1-2 tablespoons NuttZo of choice, lots and lots of cinnamon, and 3 tablespoons unsweetened vanilla almond milk or milk of choice. If you want extra sweetness, add a few drops of vanilla or regular liquid stevia, a packet of stevia, or a tablespoon of honey.

Slice a ripe medium-sized banana into 1/4 inch circles.

Saute banana slices in grass-fed butter or coconut oil on a skillet over med-high heat until they caramelize on both sides.

If you’ve never tried sauteed banana, you must steal a bite! After stealing a bite, pour egg mixture evenly over the banana slices.

Allow to set a couple minutes. Lift the sides with a spatula to let the middle drain under and cook.

After 4 or 5 minutes of this, finish your delicious dish off in a preheated 425Â°F oven for another 2 â€“ 3 minutes or until you see the middle is cooked.

Remove from oven and let cool 10 minutes before attempting to remove from skillet. I know, itâ€™s hard. Have a scoop of NuttZo while you wait.

Once cooled, place frittata on a cutting board and cut into triangles just like a dessert pizza. Serve with more NuttZo as icing on the top and keep the resulting grin on your face all day!

The cool thing about any frittata is that they are good hot or cold, so it's perfect to grab and go if you need. I recommend making time to sit and savor this one at home if you can though!
